

Wackenhut Services, Incorporated

Wackenhut Services, Incorporated (WSI) is contracted by the U.S. Department of Energy's Savannah River Operations Office to provide security support services for the 310-square-mile Savannah River Site (SRS), a critical Government nuclear facility. The initial contract went into effect on August 23, 1983. WSI was awarded a second five-year contract in 1988, and a third five-year contract in 1993. In January 1999, the Department of Energy awarded Wackenhut a new five-year contract, with an option for up to five additional years.

WSI-SRS is a paramilitary organization that provides total security services, including access control, property protection, law enforcement, criminal investigations, traffic control, canine explosives and drug detection, aviation support, river patrol, alarm equipment monitoring, and a Special Response Team.

Prior to employment, WSI-SRS employees go through an extensive background screening. It includes a check of police records, personal references, and verification of background and citizenship. Personnel in security positions must establish their qualifications through prior education and/or experience in law enforcement or the military. They must also meet strict medical and physical fitness standards.

WSI-SRS maintains a professional training staff to provide basic and specialized security training, physical conditioning, weapons training and qualification, and area-specific field training. Facilities include classrooms, mobile training vans, rifle and pistol ranges, a multi-media learning laboratory, and specialized outdoor training sites.

The administrative support functions are designed to ensure that the critical WSI-SRS mission is conducted effectively, safely, and in the most cost-efficient manner. The Company employs support staff professionals with expertise in performance testing, total quality, safety, human resources, compensation and benefits, resource management, logistics, computer systems, accounting, labor relations, and security program planning.

Wackenhut brings a commitment to excellence in security operations at the SRS. The diversified capabilities and high standards of professionalism are evident in all personnel and in our wide range of responsibilities. We accept no less than being best-in-class in the security industry!
